

PERMISSIVE ACCESS

These paths pass through a number of traditional orchards holding Lancashire varieties of apples, pears and plums. The routes also run through Outhwaite Wood, which is one of the best examples of Northern upland deciduous woodland in the country and is part of Roeburndale SSSI (Site of Special Scientific Interest). This site is nationally important, as it is one of the largest areas of ancient woodland in Lancashire. Sessile oak, hazel and ash predominately grow here. You may be lucky to see Roe Deer, which roam freely within these woods.
